From "A Loyalist's Memoir," Ken W. Clausen, Wx Post 8/9/79

He was a loyalist to the end. Quote of Nixon at San Clemente after resignation.

"Even now they try to stomp us, you know, kick us when we're down. They'll never let up, never, because we were the first threat to them in years. And by God we would have changed it all, changed it so they couldn't have changed it back for a hundred years, if only ..."

According to Clawsen he fell silent here.

Then,

"What starts the process, really, are laughs and slights and snubs when you are a kid. Sometimes it's because you're poor or Irish or Jewish of Catholic or ugly or simply that you are skinny..."